Dear Murray:

I'm sorry I was unable to be at the formal luncheon of the National News Council today. I have some blood, sweat and tears in it and am most anxious that it get off in high gear. Perhaps the gear is higher than it would have been had I been present.

At any rate, I have the highest personal and professional regard for both Roger Traynor and Bill Arthur who will really be the builders of the Council. Usually the client chooses the builder and the architect has no influence in the choice. In this case the architect had some views and I am certain we will get a better structure because of that.

Best personal regards,

Robert W. Chandler
