Dear Ralph:

I've learned that there's always an Otwell phrase to light up even such gray statistics as you sent on to Benno in your note of 30 January.

I like to believe that lawyers and journalists are going to learn much more from one another than they ever knew before as they open up new lines of communication between their respective workshops.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Benno:

Here are some sample readership surveys which might be helpful in giving you a fix on the general popularity of letters columns throughout the country:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Newspaper</th>
<th>Percentage who read letters to the editor</th>
<th>Carl J. Nelson All-study averages*</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Men</td>
<td>Women</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nashville Tennessean</td>
<td>25%</td>
<td>28%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bangor Daily News</td>
<td>33</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Washington Post</td>
<td>27</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Milwaukee Journal</td>
<td>37</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boston Globe</td>
<td>22</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(* The all-study averages vary slightly, as new data are added from individual newspaper surveys.)

The above figures have to be related to other features and parts of the newspaper to be interpreted properly, of course. That is why I’m enclosing the complete surveys. For instance, in the Tennessean, the letters are read by nearly three times as many persons as Tom Wicker; in the Bangor Daily News, letter readership is two to three times as high as readership of any news story on Pages 2 and 3; in the Washington Post, as many people read the letters as read Jack Anderson; in the Milwaukee Journal, more people read letters than read any weather news, including that on Page 1; in the Boston Globe, more people read letters than read Evans-Novak.

When you undertook the access study, you didn't realize that you were going to learn far more about newspapers than you ever wanted to know, did you?

With best regards,

Sincerely yours,

Ralph Otwell
